

CONTENTS 53 : 2 (WINTER 2025)

---

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |     |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Barbara SimmsEDITORIAL                                                                                                                                                                                         | 129 |
| Katherine MyersPLANTING AND GARDENING AT CANONS, EDGWARE, MIDDLESEX, 1713–47                                                                                                                                   | 131 |
| Christopher Gallagher‘THE ENVIRONS ARE FINISHING IN A MANNER EQUAL TO THE BUILDING’:A CONTINUING ACCOUNT OF THE HISTORY AND DEVELOPMENT OFKEDLESTON HALL, ITS PARK AND ITS DESIGNED LANDSCAPE, 1756–90 | 147 |
| Michael CousinsHALSWELL, SOMERSET, AN IDIOSYNCRATIC LANDSCAPE: BACKGROUND,CONTEXT AND LAYOUT                                                                                                               | 172 |
| Michael SymesTHE FILTER APPROACH TO UNDERSTANDING AND RESTORING HISTORICGARDENS                                                                                                                            | 193 |
| Helen LangleyREGGIE COOPER (1885–1965), RESTORER OF HOUSES AND MAKEROF GARDENS                                                                                                                             | 207 |
| NOTES & QUERIES                                                                                                                                                                                                    |     |
| Gert W. WellingCORRIGENDUM: ‘THE FLORAL LEGACY OF A SEVENTEENTH-CENTURYLINEN WEAVER’, GARDEN HISTORY , 51/1 (2023), pp. 91–6                                                                        | 227 |
| BOOK REVIEWS                                                                                                                                                                                                       |     |
| Frederick Hervey-BathurstClive Aslet, Sir Edwin Lutyens: Britain’s Greatest Architect?                                                                                                                  | 228 |
| John EdmondsonTomas Aniško, I, Buxus: A Cultural History of the Tree of Afterlife                                                                                                                       | 229 |
| David BrownThomas Pakenham, The Tree Hunters: How the Cult of the ArboretumTransformed Our Landscape                                                                                               | 229 |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |     |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| John Dixon HuntRoland Mayer, The Ruins of Rome: A Cultural History                                                                                                                                              | 231 |
| John Dixon HuntPia Maria Simig (ed.), Fragments: Ian Hamilton Finlay                                                                                                                                            | 232 |
| Caroline IkinJohn Dixon Hunt, Walking &amp; Talking on the Here and Elsewhere                                                                                                                                   | 233 |
| Katie CampbellPatricia Osmond and Kate Thomas (eds), Our Hillsides: Women Expatriates and Their Villas and Gardens on the Hills of Florence 1890–1950:                                                          |     |
| Book 1: Tiffany L. Johnston, Villa I Tatti: Mary Berenson’s ‘Golden Urn’ Arcadia                                                                                                                                    |     |
| Book 2: Patricia Osmond, Princess Ghyka and Miss Florence Blood at the Gamberaia. Stories from the Letters and Diaries of Mary and Bernard Berenson and of Other Neighbors, Friends, and Visitors on ‘Our Hillside’ |     |
| Book 3: Kate Thomas, Vernon Lee: A Sibyl at Il Palmerino                                                                                                                                                            |     |
| Book 4: Alessandra Marchetti and Patricia Osmond, with Michele Amedei, Nina Auzias and Leo Stein from Montparnasse to Settignano                                                                                    | 235 |

COVER

William Marlow (1740–1813), View of Rome from the Tiber, c.1775. Detail.
 Courtesy: Philadelphia Museum of Art, Gift of Jay Cooke, 1955, 1955-2-4
 (see Gallagher, p. 154)